Art and protest

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

The cast of Hamilton speaking to Mike Pence. Facebook

This weekend the story about Vice President-elect Mike Pence getting booed by the audience and lectured by the cast at Hamilton, as well as President-elect Trump's tweet-fit over it, dominated the news. Many warned that those tweets were calculated to distract from Trump's $25 million fraud settlement over his so-called university, a first for an on-deck commander in chief and a grim harbinger for his future as steward of American law and education. Of course he tweeted about this, too, calling the settlement a "small fraction" of the $40 million suit, prompting further questions about his understanding of fractions.

Certainly some members of the media and public were distracted by the stage and social media theatrics — you can get caught up at nonprofit news outlet www.ProPublica.org, which has assembled "The Absolute Best, Most Terrific Reporting on Trump University" — but if we are to follow and report on the next four years, we may need to get better at multitasking and considering more than one awful story at a time.

But the Hamilton moment is worth focusing on, too, and not just because of the irony of Trump calling for a "safe space," a term often ridiculed by his base, or the boycott of a play that's sold out until the second coming. Actor Brandon Dixon implored Pence, "We, sir, we are the diverse America, who are alarmed and anxious that your new administration will not protect us, our planet, our children, our parents or defend us and uphold our inalienable rights, sir. But we truly hope that this show has inspired you to uphold our American values and to work on behalf of all of us." The cast used its platform to speak on behalf of people of color, religious minorities, immigrants, women and the LGBTQ community, the very people who make up the cast lined up for curtain call. But this diversity is not exclusive to Lin Manuel Miranda's hip hop-infused show.

The arts — music, visual art, dance, theater, literature — despite what the overwhelmingly white, male canon would show you, have always been a haven for those outside the mainstream, the very groups that find themselves in the most precarious positions under oppressive regimes. And given that Pence himself has been a proponent of shifting HIV research funds to objectively abusive and homophobic "conversion therapy," as well as making it a crime for same-sex couples to apply for marriage licenses, they're right to worry about him. Add to that Trump surrogate Carl Higbie suggesting last week that the imprisonment of Japanese American citizens during World War II set a precedent for national Muslim registration, all while white supremacists are popping bottles over Trump's election at a Washington, D.C., convention, and an oppressive regime is not sounding far off. The Hamilton cast was wise to use the chance to be heard. In times when minorities and the poor are most heavily and forcefully silenced, stages, microphones, bookstores and galleries become our pulpits, our outlets and our strongholds.

Art is also a mainline to the mainstream audience, one of our best avenues of influence. Scoff if you like at the activism of actors, musicians and writers, but in the 1980s, when the Reagan administration largely ignored the AIDS crisis, the ACT UP movement, the ranks of which were thick with artists and performers, used street art and exhibitions to spread its message. Dismiss protest music and political art, too, if you like. But though history may be written by the victors, art, to the horror of those in power, can sculpt how we perceive it, how we remember it. It is the reason Tsar Nicholas bothered to send Fyodor Dostoyevsky to the gulag and China's government concerned itself with jailing Ai Weiwei. Think for a moment about the Holocaust and consider how much of what your mind's eye provides is from film, photography or the stories of those who lived it.

In his beautiful and crushing memoir Survival in Auschwitz, Primo Levi describes trying to recite Dante Alighieri's The Divine Comedy, the lines he could recall at once offering him a way to understand his very real hell and feel his humanity again if only for a few minutes. This is what art offers both creator and audience: a shift in perspective, sometimes a little needed escapism, a means to speak above the noise, a sign that we are not alone and a tool of survival.

Along with marching peacefully, subscribing to newspapers, donating to worthy causes and reaching out to each other, it is vital that we engage in and support the arts. Luckily for us, Humboldt is packed with painters, dancers, poets and songwriters. Throw a rock and someone will yarn-bomb it, paint it or add it to a found-object sculpture. We are counting on creative people of all backgrounds in our community to keep nudging us out of our comfort zones and reminding us of the world's beauty. We need them to practice an aesthetics of inclusion in a political climate that would seek to isolate us. They are counting on us to open ourselves to their work, to respond and, if we have means, to pay for some of it so they can eat the good ramen noodles once in a while.

Visit our galleries and museums. Listen to an art talk. Go hear some live music and tip the band. Hit up a drag show (bring bills, honey). Go to the symphony. See a play. Buy a ticket and come ready to applaud if it moves you. Come ready to hear a point of view that is not your own. Come ready to be unabashedly swept up. And when you are confronted with those who want us to shuffle offstage and disappear back into the wings, come ready to boo. ●

Good Things Coming

Editor:

Judy Hodgson shows considerably less grace in her column ("Didn't See That Coming," Nov. 10) than either Donald Trump or Hillary Clinton post election. In so doing, she amply demonstrates the media bias often discussed during the presidential race.

Here's one good thing that can possibly come out of this election: new policies and tax changes that prevent jobs and corporate capital from leaving this country.

Miles Slattery on why healthy parks make Eureka safer

By Thadeus Greenson
newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

After the Journal ran a story about Highland Park last month ("Appropriate Use," Oct. 6), Eureka Parks and Recreation Director Miles Slattery reached out. The article was good, he said, but some of the numbers cited — while accurate — were a bit misleading. The story compared total parks and recreation department budgets for Arcata, Eureka and Fortuna, finding the cities' investments were roughly equal. But it turns out that, if you look at what the cities spend from their general funds solely on maintaining their existing parks, Eureka trails its neighbors, dedicating just 2.8 percent of its general fund spending to the cause compared to 5.2 percent in Arcata and 8.8 percent in Fortuna.

Our conversation with Slattery — who oversees a department with six employees who combine to oversee 600 acres of space spread across 13 parks, nine playgrounds and six ball fields, not to mention all the landscaped areas in and around city parking lots and buildings — ventured into some interesting areas, including public safety, addiction, poverty and community. So, we've decided to share it with our readers.

NCJ: Are parks a luxury or a necessity?

Slattery: Parks are a necessity for a healthy and livable community. Parks and community spaces are an essential community tool as a proactive deterrent for youth, a place for respite and a platform to engage in positive and healthy activities for people of all ages. A community without safe and well-used parks is a blighted community.

NCJ: How can parks help make a Eureka a safer place to live?

Slattery: It's not parks themselves that can make Eureka a safer place to live, it's the surrounding community. Providing public spaces that create a desire for community ownership can provide an incentive for youth to make better decisions. ...

When Eureka's parks are filled with safe recreational opportunities, both active and passive, the increased use of the parks provides a more effective deterrent than a police response, which is primarily a reactive approach. To rely on enforcement has proven to be costly. The cost of putting an officer at every public space to deter inappropriate uses will never be feasible and be much more costly than providing a space that the community takes ownership of, which will inherently provide an equal deterrent.

Any family or neighborhood, regardless of income or ethnicity, does not feel a sense of community ownership and desire to protect their public space when the municipality does not demonstrate an equal interest. This sense of ownership is key to deter inappropriate uses. Poorly maintained parks result in them not being used by the neighboring residents.

NCJ: What can the parks and recreation department do to help make that happen?

Slattery: Parks & Recreation can contribute to this through various ways — one being the recreational programming itself. Last year, we were awarded a grant through the State Parks Habitat Conservation Funding, which allowed us to expand our free summer camp program at Cooper Gulch into an environmental education camp. With 75 kids participating in recreational activities for nine hours each day during the summer months, we saw a drastic reduction in inappropriate use during those months at Cooper Gulch.

The challenge is that, in order for us to even have programming or encourage the public to engage in appropriate use of our parks, they have to be maintained and usable in the first place.

The state has not provided park bond funding for about a decade. ... P&R has been looking at creative ways to obtain funding for our parks. We have applied for two grants recently for parks.

We also have established a fund for Sequoia Park at the Humboldt Area Foundation to solicit donations from businesses and the public, and are beginning to launch the campaign.

NCJ: Do you feel like there's a correlation between parks and recreation's historic funding levels and crime rates?

Slattery: No. What I believe is that the reactive approach to public safety has proven to be a broken system. It's time we recognize this, and collectively embrace a proactive approach before it becomes too costly to save the areas that have been neglected over the years.

In the 1980s and into the '90s, the city of Eureka allocated just over 50 percent of its general fund to public safety. In 1990, the population of Eureka was 27,025. The population is currently estimated to be 26,925. The city is built out and our population has been stagnant for decades. Over these years, we have seen a significant increase in funding to public safety. We currently spend more than 70 percent of the general fund on public safety.

Even with this significant increase in funding, we have seen an increase in the majority of crime rate statistics between the 1980s and now. This has nothing to do with the effectiveness of our police and fire services. They provide exemplary service and do an incredible job. The problem is the theory that the only way to deter crime is to reactively punish people so they won't continue their criminal ways. This obviously doesn't work.

NCJ: Humboldt County has a host of cyclical problems, things like poverty and addiction. Is there a role parks and recreation can play in getting to the root of some of the entrenched problems?

Slattery: I think our department is on the cutting edge of recognizing we have a role. We have developed proactive programming in Parks and Recreation to not only provide access to families affected by poverty and addiction but also resources for these community members.

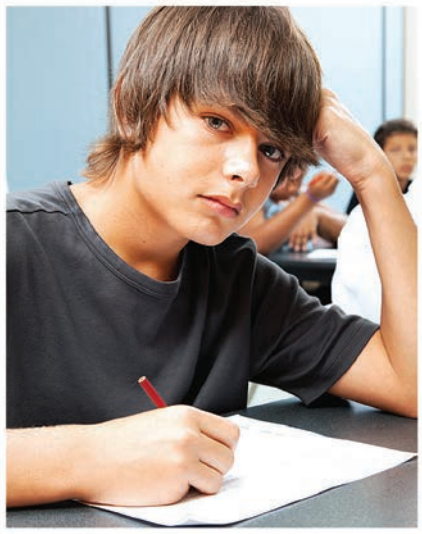

The Community Access Project for Eureka (CAPE) has been developed over the past year to remove barriers for disadvantaged community members so they can have access to programming that was never available to them previously. We have secured donations, grants and developed partnerships so that we can provide transportation, free summer camps, community classes and after-school care for disadvantaged youth — whether houseless, low-income or anyone else experiencing barriers.

This was the first step in the program. Once we were able to provide this for the children and free up time for the parents/guardians of these youth, we developed and implemented programming for disadvantaged and homeless adults to provide them resources.

We developed Pathway to Payday and the R.E.N.T. Ready program. We implemented these programs in partnership with the Betty Kwan Chinn Day Center and have had great success. Fifteen of 19 attendees of the Pathway to Payday secured jobs. Two were hired and still work for Parks and Recreation. This model has proven to be such a success that we were recently invited to present at the California League of Cities to talk about the CAPE program.

NCJ: Eureka remains in a budget pinch without enough funds to hold the line, meaning additional investment in one department necessitates taking money away from another. Come June, why should the Eureka City Council approve more parks funding if it means making reductions elsewhere?

Slattery: Look, I don't want to see any department's funding cut. I just feel we need to recognize that a greater investment is needed in our parks and quality of life services. I understand that public safety is a top priority, and it should be.

However, investing in our public spaces will inherently provide a deterrent to crime. Investing in our parks, public spaces and quality of life IS investing in public safety. This has been demonstrated over and over, even in Eureka. Calls for service have significantly decreased along the Hikshari' Trail and Elk River area since it was developed. The same can, and will, be said for the rest of the Waterfront Trail development.

NCJ: How has the role of the parks department in Eureka changed over the last decade?

Slattery: We have seen a significant decrease in funding and staffing levels. Because of this we have gone through multiple re-organizations. The big reorganization was the development of the Parks and Recreation Department in 2013. Since then we have taken the "other duties as assigned" statement in job descriptions to a new level.

We have trained recreation, harbor and facilities staff on parks duties and parks staff on recreation, harbor and facility duties so that we can maintain as much coverage of our responsibilities as possible. We have also worked with multiple different agencies to establish volunteer programs for our trails and parks.

Furthermore, we have put a heavy emphasis on alternative funding for capital projects through grants and local donations. We've put more of an emphasis on trying to increase revenue through new programming and facility rental. What has been successful in other communities is dedicating a percentage of TOT toward parks and public facilities. This doesn't increase taxes for our community members and would provide more attractive amenities that could draw greater visitor numbers with longer stay times. I think this is something we should look into so we could have a sustainable funding source.

NCJ: What role can community members take in advocating for/helping with parks?

Slattery: Volunteer and donate where possible. We would also like to hear from the community about what they would like to see or any thoughts on strategies they have for improving our parks. They can call me any time, 441-4184.

We would really like to establish a general Parks Improvement Fund that could fund improvements for all of our parks at Humboldt Area Foundation. It costs $10,000 to establish the fund. Through the establishment of the fund, a prioritized list of parks improvements would be defined. We could solicit funding from various grant opportunities, businesses and local residents to take care of those priorities in a systematic way.

This interview has been edited for length. Read more at www.northcoastjournal.com and, if you want to get involved to help Eureka's parks, call Slattery at 441-4184 to find out how.

G Street Squat

Neighbors band together to find creative solutions for problem properties

By Linda Stansberry
linda@northcoastjournal.com

The Eureka Police Department has visited the old Victorian at 1625 G St. 60 times in the last six months. The types of calls range from complaints about noise and suspicious people to welfare checks on suicidal residents. The front door has been battered and reinforce with plywood. Public works staff have been called repeatedly, both visiting and doing drive-bys on a regular basis.

"There are a ton of broken windows. One of the tenants called me two months ago and asked me to do an inspection because Floyd [Squires] keeps taking his door away," said Matt Morgan, the city's code inspector. "I counted multiple people in the house — upwards of 30 people. There was a girl who was running around naked and on drugs. Other guys were doing heroin in the hallways, or in the rooms smoking it."

Morgan asked the resident how many people living there were actually paying rent. He said about four people. Many unrented apartments and rooms had been boarded off, only to have the plywood torn down and people come in off the street to squat there. Public works sent the property owner, Floyd Squires, a citation notice.

"They're totally trashing the place," said Morgan. "No one wants to go in there."

But several people — the paying tenants of the building — feel they have no other place to go. (Because of their fear of eviction, the tenants declined to speak to the Journal.) Some are in fragile physical or emotional health, and at least one has an eviction record that is preventing him from renting from a different landlord, a familiar story with Squires' tenants. Along with the unsecured front door that allows people to squat in the hallways and empty rooms, the city's code enforcement team has issued citations for inadequate heating and sanitation, hazardous wiring, leaning and buckling wall supports, and a lack of emergency escapes. (A call to Squires' lawyer went unreturned.)

Since these violations were first noted in 2010, some work has been done on the property. But it, along with 26 other Squires properties, is currently in receivership, meaning the landlord's negligence reached the extremes of requiring the intervention of a judge to place the properties in the hands of a third party to take out loans and make needed repairs. But, as noted in the Journal's Sept. 1 cover story, "Suing Squires," Judge Dale Reinholtsen instituted a strange, hybrid system to address Floyd and Betty Squires' properties, allowing the couple to continue to act as landlords and also to oversee any repairs on the sites. The Squireses have drug their feet on pulling permits and requesting inspections, leading to a backlog of work as tenants continue to pay rent on buildings that are falling down around their ears. So while public works continues to cite the landlords for code violations, it has essentially used the last and most drastic weapon in its limited arsenal — receivership — and still failed to win the war.

"We have exhausted every resource," said Brian Issa, the city's code enforcement manager. "When people ask me what they can do, I say, 'Move.'" That's not be being flippant, that's me giving them the best advice we can."

But the tenants cannot, or will not, move. Instead a different, unlikely, army has been mustered to defend them.

On the evening of Nov. 9, close to 30 people squeezed into the community meeting room at the Jefferson Community Center for the initial meeting of the G Street Neighborhood Network. Heidi Benzonelli, co-director of the Westside Community Improvement Association, facilitated the meeting in her customary hearty shout.

"I am your employee," she told the eclectic crowd as they snacked on enchiladas prepared in the Jefferson kitchen. "Tell me what you would like to do and I will work on it."

To begin the meeting, Benzonelli first explained the purpose of a neighborhood network, which is similar in structure to a traditional Neighborhood Watch program, with neighbors looking out for one another and making their presence felt to help deter bad actors.

"The problem is that, if you're only looking at crime, once the crime goes, the organization goes too," she told the Journal. A neighborhood network is intended to focus on a wider, more holistic array of issues. The population of Eureka's Westside also tends to be more transient, with more renters than homeowners. Persistent community engagement and unification could create a set of guiding principles so that when a person joined the neighborhood, there would be standards and expectations in place.

Benzonelli went door to door speaking to Westside residents, asking them what changes they would like to see in the area. She found a perception that the neighborhoods were unsafe. Residents deemed addressing blight and chronic nuisance properties a priority, and among those nuisance properties, the apartments at 17th and G streets drew particular concern. Benzonelli invited the entire neighborhood to get together and brainstorm solutions.

At the front of the room, facing Benzonelli, sat two older ladies wearing flower-print shirts.

"I'm afraid to take my dogs out at night," said one woman, adding that people staying at 1625 G St. were often loud and erratic, and there were dilapidated cars parked up and down the block.

"I am scared to come home after work," said her neighbor. "I know some of these people and they're fine. But other people are yelling. I don't want to come home at night."

Next to the two older women, two of the tenants spoke up. It was the first time they had met their neighbors. They were not, they explained, inviting people into the building. They were scared too.

A close-up of the repairs needed at 1625 G St.

"The problem is that squatters have taken over the building," said one man. "We want to be a trusted neighbor, but we need help from the city and county."

Benzonelli encouraged the room to come up with creative solutions. Could one of the tenants act as an interim property manager? Could the neighbors help with the garbage that was overflowing? Has anyone been going to city council meetings? Would it be possible to purchase the building and renovate it? Several people suggested filing a lawsuit, which Benzonelli said she would investigate. But in the meantime, what would make the neighbors and tenants feel safer? The meeting-goers found several points of accord, including a streetlight that had been out of commission for more than a year. Simply restoring some light to the street might abate some crime. Councilmember Kim Bergel, who attended the meeting, promised to take their concerns to the city manager and to investigate fixing the streetlight. Benzonelli also pledged to help tenants and neighbors coordinate with EPD's Problem-Oriented Policing unit, which could document ongoing issues with crime and drugs.

A second meeting to discuss progress has been scheduled for Dec. 1. In the meantime, tenants in the building say there are still issues with theft, with squatters and difficult living conditions. Morgan continues to drive by and check on the building. One small accomplishment? The neighbors now appear to be looking out for — not just looking at — the tenants.

"We got a call last week from a neighbor saying he hadn't seen any movement," said Morgan. "He asked, 'Will you go make sure they're OK?'"

Morgan and the POP team went to check on the tenants. They were, for the time being, doing OK. ●

Stop It

By Linda Stansberry
linda@northcoastjournal.com

Stop. I am begging you, just stop. Stop posting pictures of yourself where you've held the camera so you look like a cubist painting instead of your true chubby self. We want to see your real face. Stop it. Stop calling my pets "furbabies" and extending me an unwanted "Happy Mother's Day" because you think I think they're my kids. No child has ever pooped with the compact discretion of my cats, whose practical nature will also allow them to eat my body once I've died, alone, on my living room floor. They're not babies, they're more like codependent roommates who have no idea what I'm saying when I lean down and nuzzle their squishy widdle faces. And that's for the best, because usually I'm muttering about a terrible article that popped up on my "cannabis/marijuana" Google alert.

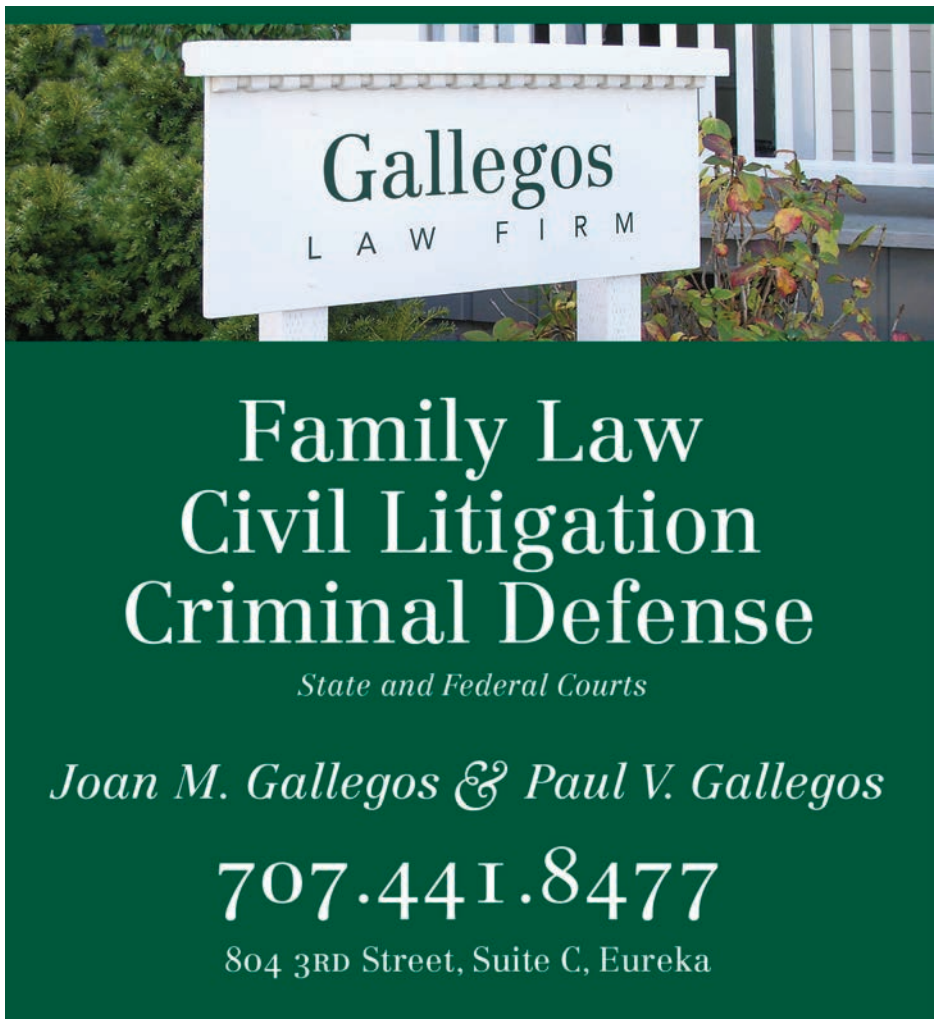

Oh my god, weed bloggers, please stop.

Stop giving inferior/ill-conceived products the limelight just because they contain cannabis. Cannabis chocolate. Cannabis beer. Cannabis wine. Yes, some of us need a way to ingest pot without smoking it. And some fusion products, I'm going to assume, are edible, tasty and enhanced by the presence of THC. But there has to be a point where throwing a pot leaf on a product is jumping the shark, and it has to be soon. Because if I see one more review where the arc is "I tried this because it had pot in it — and it was terrible/ineffective/dangerous!" I am going to have to start drinking again. Really, the wine you tried was "skunky and ashy … reminiscent of a car ashtray?" (www.VinePair.com, Nov. 21) Really? Stooop.

Stop writing about the effects of putting cannabinoids in your vagina. I have reversed my stance on using cannabis suppositories for menstrual cramps, because I realized that a) even if it doesn't really work, it doesn't seem like it's going to hurt anyone and b) I'm not a doctor. But for that matter, neither are you. And now that we've seen 50-plus articles that hinge on the creativity of VAGINA + MARIJUANA = TEE HEE, maybe it's time to call it a day and let professionals evaluate whether or not it's an effective treatment for gynecological problems. From here on out, I am just going to bite my tongue whenever I see an unoriginal article about what it was like to have weed in your ladybits and, instead of ranting about it, I'll make a donation to a research foundation. I am not rich. So please, stop it.

And stop pulling asinine stunts like drinking entire bottles of weed lubricant. (www.broadly.vice.com, Feb. 2016). Oh my god, that's a great clickbait headline, but really? Really? You had no idea what would happen? Really? Lady, I've seen the picture of you sprawled sick on your bed, green and clutching a bag of chips as your corgi sits nervously under your cluttered desk. Your poor furbaby looks terrified. Stop. It. ●

Jury finds officer, McClain negligent in fatal shooting

The last hours of Thomas "Tommy" McClain's life began with a night out on the town to celebrate his cousin's birthday. It ended with the 22-year-old lying mortally wounded in his front yard after being shot three times by a Eureka police officer.

While jurors in the federal civil case found Officer Stephen Linfoot did not use excessive or unreasonable force, they also decided that he and McClain were equally negligent for the fatal encounter that occurred outside an Allard Avenue home in 2014.

The panel of five women and one man came to the unanimous verdict on Friday, hours after being handed the wrongful death suit brought by McClain's parents.

The jury awarded them $300,000 in damages, but because McClain was found 50 percent responsible, the amount was reduced by half, with each of his parents receiving $75,000.

Attorney Dale Galipo, who represented McClain's parents, said they just wanted some finding of police responsibility in their son's death.

"I think the family is pleased with the verdict," Galipo said. "They view it as a victory."

The family's hope, he said, is "this won't happen to someone else."

Eureka police Chief Andrew Mills said he was thankful but found no glory in the verdict, noting this was a tragic case that left a young man dead.

"It was avoidable," Mills said. "(McClain) made some bad choices and ended up being in an officer-involved shooting. I feel for the parents. ... I feel for the officers. This was the last thing they wanted to go through and endure. It's just sad all the way around."

Attorneys on both sides agreed on at least one thing as they gave their closing statements on Friday: None of this needed to happen. Where they diverged was who ultimately bore the responsibility for McClain's death.

The city's attorney Nancy Delaney told jurors that McClain made a series of alcohol-fueled choices, setting in motion the events that led to his fatal shooting.

She compared Linfoot to a driver who is unable to avoid hitting a child who suddenly darted into the street.

"Imagine the devastation you'd feel," Delaney said. "It's emotional. You have sympathy for the family. But it's not fair to tell the driver it's his fault. It's not fair."

Galipo, in turn, said Linfoot overreacted in those chaotic final moments, firing not once, but seven times even as McClain fell over and after he hit the ground.

"We have to expect better of our police. ... (McClain) didn't deserve the death penalty," Galipo said. "That's what he got."

McClain never presented a threat, the attorney said, but was simply trying to comply when he was met with Linfoot's shout of "get down," which caused him to start lowering his hands.

"One has to wonder. ... Tommy McClain knows he doesn't have a real gun," Galipo said. "Who is going to pull a replica gun on police when they don't have a record and they're all pointing their guns at you? It doesn't make sense."

Galipo noted several witnesses — including officers — testified during the week-long trial that McClain didn't appear intoxicated.

Coincidence played a major role in those early morning hours of Sept. 17, 2014, when a surveillance sting on a neighboring residence brought McClain into police sights.

Officers were looking for a man on the department's Most Wanted list. Their attention turned to McClain after he confronted a man on the street and fiddled with what appeared to be a gun in his waistband.

Linfoot was sent to drive by in his patrol car under a plan to scare McClain back inside his house. After he passed, officers testified they saw McClain pull the slide of what turned out to be a BB gun that resembled a handgun before placing the weapon back in his waistband.

That action, Delaney said, brought police to his doorstep.

"It was Mr. McClain pulling out a replica handgun in violation of the law and racking the slide. Who does that in response to a police vehicle driving by?" she asked. "Who does that? Not someone with a mindset to cooperate with law enforcement."

Police say McClain was shot while reaching for the replica gun after defying a series of orders to keep his hands up. McClain's family and one witness maintain his arms were raised as he attempted to follow conflicting commands from three officers when he was hit by gunfire.

Galipo pointed to shooting witness Nichole Mottern, the wife of McClain's cousin, who testified she was "100 percent sure" McClain had his hands at chest level when Linfoot fired.

Delaney questioned Mottern's credibility, saying much of her account was "physically impossible."

Both sides presented testimony from law enforcement experts who gave conflicting views on a number of key factors in the case, including the officers' actions that night and whether the shooting was justified.

"Mr. McClain could have said to them, 'It's not real,' kept his hands up and walked the sidewalk," Delaney said. "They would determine what it was, everyone goes home and officer Linfoot doesn't have to live with it."

Galipo said officers made a number of tactical errors that night, from giving conflicting commands to failing to take cover to allow for more time to assess the situation.

The case, Galipo told jurors, was about more than what happened to McClain that night, saying "everyone has a right to be free from excessive force."

"It's sad to think that if Officer Linfoot had not fired we wouldn't be here today," Galipo told jurors, referencing testimony that the first four bullets he fired might have missed McClain. "If he had only fired one shot, we wouldn't be here today."

No charges: Citing a lack of evidence, the Humboldt County District Attorney's office announced charges were not being pursued against two 15-year-olds accused of plotting to bomb a Fortuna High School assembly. Fortuna police Chief Bill Dobberstein had told media an alleged "mass casualty" event was thwarted. After the decision, a FPD release stated any new leads will be followed. POSTED 11.16.16

Cannabis concerns: A proposed urgency ordinance to halt the production, sale and distribution of pot for recreational use failed to garner the needed four-fifths vote from a divided Eureka City Council. City Attorney Cyndy Day-Wilson suggested the ordinance would give staff time to review options under the Adult Use of Marijuana Act (Proposition 64) passed by California voters Nov. 8. POSTED 11.18.16

Comment of the Week

Got a minute?

Then you've got time for a story. Our readers cranked out 113 trim tales of 99 words or fewer for our annual Flash Fiction Contest, proving once again that Humboldt contains multitudes. There were brief romances, lonely wanderings, presidentially foul language (consider yourself warned) and bloody murders. Lots of murders, actually. Maybe look into that, writers.

Our esteemed judges, professional readers all, included College of the Redwoods English professor David Holper, retired children's librarian JoAnn Bauer and Booklegger proprietresses Jennifer McFadden and Nancy Short. Enjoy these brief escapes into other lives and other worlds. It'll only take a minute.

A Question of Love

By Christopher Christianson

"Do you love me?"

"Yes, I love you," he said, but his voice went up on the word yes, and they both knew it.

There was a small silence. He sat up and tried to hug her, but she turned away and covered her face.

"I ... I'm sorry," he said.

She said nothing. He lay back down and looked up at the ceiling. A siren wailed somewhere far off outside. It was a long time before anyone moved.

"This story turns on a single word, and a tone of voice that betrays its meaning. We were impressed by the subtlety and sophistication of this piece — how a momentous revelation happens in such a quiet moment."
— Jennifer McFadden and Nancy Short

"In case you needed reminding how quickly everything can go to hell. This stripped-down moment mirrors the challenge of flash fiction: to break a heart, alter a world with a few words (79!) or even just one."

Murder on the Line

By Alexis George

I set out in search of the gang just arrived to town. They were flocked at the corner of Samoa and V when I found them, looking disheveled in the rain.

It was hazy, but one thing was clear; they weren't from around here. The cows bellowed in protest. They didn't like what was going on, and neither did I.

"Scram!" I yelled. The jig was up. Their leader looked me in the eye.

"Caw!" Spreading their wings, the crows took to the wire above.

I tipped my hat, "I'd head south if I were you."

"I enjoy collective nouns and a murder of crows is especially intriguing. I love the way this writer spun off from that term into a great Noir riff. Since I've read this piece, I find myself looking at crows in a whole new light."
— JoAnn Bauer

Lifeless

By Christopher Christianson

The stuffed animals were still on the couch where she'd left them: a white and red horse; a small pig; and a doll, dressed in overalls with a beanie that never stayed on. She'd lined them all up in a row, facing the TV. He couldn't bring himself to move them.

But she was ready. "Patrick, it's time we put these ..."

"No!" His eyes glistened. His voice cracked. "No." This time softer, almost a whisper. She hugged him. He kept staring at them. The doll's eyes looked back, but there was no life there. They were all lifeless.

"A snapshot of the loss of a child that brilliantly never mentions the child nor the loss."

Whatever Works

By Sheila Evans

Harvey was on time but his wife was uncharacteristically late and he was concerned. Opportunities like this didn't come along every day, and he didn't want to miss out. He was near the front of the quickly moving line, so he decided to keep going. When it is his turn, Harvey answered the qualifying questions, and was invited on board. The massive doors closed, countdown began, and the Branson Galaxy Shuttle blasted off. As Harvey leaves the planet, he wonders what his wife will think.

She isn't thinking at all. She's singing "50 Ways to Leave Your Lover."

"I may be too fond of O. Henry and Guy de Maupassant, but I do have a weakness for twist endings and Flash Fiction lends itself to this technique. I thought the first part was very well written and then the end came out of nowhere and I laughed out loud."
— JoAnn Bauer

A Red Satin Bra

By Peter Mehren

I meant well, of course, but the saleslady in the lingerie store smiled patronizingly after I'd held up my cupped hands, saying, "She's about this size."

"Did you tear her underwear?" she asked.

"No. I just thought it would be a sweet Valentine's Day present."

"Your girlfriend, not your wife?"

"Yes."

"Don't. Men buy underwear for their girlfriends for the same reason people buy paper for wrapping gifts, imagining removing them to find the presents."

"No, but —"

"Indeed, no buts. Come in the store now and then, and fantasize. But as for presents, just get her candy or flowers."

"Advice on buying women's underwear that reveals all."

Diner regulars, Chick, Rose, and their three daughters, always come on Friday nights. They all squeeze into a booth, laughing and elbowing each other, a fun family, and a pleasure to serve. Molly, their redhead, orders her grilled cheese with ketchup and oregano.

They stop coming in when Chick hits a big lottery jackpot.

A year goes by, Chick and Rose show up: He is wearing a diamond stud and a leather jacket, she looks much older.

"Where are the girls"? I asked.

"Ungrateful bitches" Rose snarled.

They slid into a booth, ate in silence, left a dollar tip.

"A wry twist on the common desire to win the lottery, with the big prize being a broken family and a miserly tip."

How I Learned to Love Mushrooms

By Peter Mehren

A poor teenager, I parsimoniously took a girlfriend to a pizza restaurant.

Party at next table got up to leave, just as their last pizza arrived. One asked, "Would you kids like a mushroom pizza?"

Before I could make a disgusted sound — although I knew not why I thought I didn't like mushrooms — she said in delight, "Oh, yes, please!"

I could either swallow my pride and a bite of pizza or I could appear an unsophisticated jerk. Thinking of her beauty, I took a hearty bite.

Now I can distinguish between shiitake and Portobello with my eyes closed.

"[This] conveys a sweet innocence in pursuit of first love, and its accompanying inadvertent growth."
— Jennifer McFadden and Nancy Short

Mexican Revelations

By Lauri Rose

She slapped the water out of her teenager's hand, "Don't drink that! Only the natives can drink it, they've grown up with it."

John stared at the red plastic cup lying on the ground. Domingo stared at John, then at John's mother, then down at the cup on the ground. Shame flamed his face.

That night, golden-skinned Domingo's cock tight in his ass, John lost his virginity. Afterwards he drank a tall glass of cold water, the condensate cool against his hot hand. Years later he would remember he never did get sick from it.

"This economical story about growing up and discovery manages to show a parent's protective concern in sharp contrast to new horizons the parent likely didn't even know were in the picture."
— Jennifer McFadden and Nancy Short

Gulp

By Kristina Patterson

He hadn't told her that his parents would be at dinner. The three of them grinned impatiently as she settled into a chair.

She had the pasta, blandly sauced and sprinkled with inane conversation. Said no to dessert. She couldn't wait to get out — of the restaurant and the relationship.

"Cheesecake all around!"

Sigh.

The first bite was sweet and velvety. The next grazed her teeth. In it was an object — metal, circular, large. Two karats, at least.

Three anxious faces stared.

With a closed-lip smile, she took a swig of wine, and swallowed the entire mouthful.

"This is another unexpected ending, although when you go back and read it again, there's a lot of foreshadowing. What an awkward situation and it left me wondering what in the world the boyfriend and his parents thought happened to the ring! I enjoy a (very) short story that leaves the reader wondering what happens next."
— JoAnn Bauer

"Well, that was awkward. We loved the humor in this one and the character's fast (if shortsighted) thinking. We hope your Thanksgiving dinner goes better."

Bring us a Shrubbery!

Best plants for an edible hedge

By Heather Jo Flores
downanddirty@northcoastjournal.com

No garden is complete without a yummy patch of edible, perennial shrubbery! Even a small garden can squeeze in a few brambles, berries or 'chokes. To create a low-maintenance food forest with a year-round harvest and multiple layers of plants, a mid-sized perennial understory is an essential piece of the design.

Shrubs connect the canopy to the ground and create habitats for birds and insects. The shrub layer also shelters smaller plants and creates boundaries and microclimates.

Here on the North Coast, we are lucky to have a wide selection of edible shrubs numbering in the hundreds. I picked a baker's dozen of my favorites that are easy to grow and disease-resistant while providing a reliable, perennial harvest. Plant them all and you'll be well on your way to the food forest of your dreams!

Artichoke

I have a particular fetish for artichokes grown either in a wide hedge or placed at random across a mowed grassy lawn. The spiny leaves look like something out of Jurassic Park and the flowers are a giant, delicious thistle. Artichokes are water-thirsty and gophers love to eat their roots, so plant them in a bent chicken wire "gopher basket" and irrigate during the dry season.

Blueberry

This seems like a no-brainer — who doesn't love blueberries? But they aren't for every site, nor for every gardener. Blueberries need sun, regular pruning and fertilizing, protection from birds, acidic mulch and other forms of special attention. So do your homework and consider whether blueberries are really your best choice.

Cane Fruits

Pretty much everything in the genera Rubus (blackberries, raspberries, etc.) is edible and easy to grow. I enjoy using cane fruit hedges to create "rooms" in a large garden area, sectioning off zones for napping or secret fountains. Prune canes annually, in the fall when fruit is done. Cut branches that fruited this year to ankle-height while retaining the young shoots, which will be the ones that set fruit in the spring. Like any plant, cane fruits love a top dressing of rich compost. Harvest ever-bearing varieties daily to provoke a sustained harvest of up to six months.

Canna

Not all types are edible but canna lilies are such a beautiful, stunning addition to any garden. Canna edulis is an edible species that can be used much like tapioca. Break apart the corms and plant a patch near the house so you can watch the show of insects and birds attracted to almost year-round blooms.

Currants

There are about 150 species of edible currants, but my favorite is the classic flavor of the red currant (Ribes rubrum). I design site-specific gardens to meet the needs of the client/homeowner/gardener, but pretty much always include currants. Regardless of which species you choose, currants grow well as an understory shrub in marginal areas with part shade and acid soil. The plants can be susceptible to rust and mildew, so weed and rake around them once in a while and give them some nice composted manure every year.

Figs

I discussed figs in last month's column and, yes, most fig varieties are tree-sized. Except 'Petite negra', which only grows 4 or 5 feet tall and does quite well in our temperate climate.

Gooseberries

Because of their bittersweet flavor and super thorny stems, these aren't my favorite choice for small gardens. But as a hedge to deter animals or create privacy and security, gooseberries are an awesome edible alternative to barbed wire. You can "coppice" them by establishing the plant then cutting it all the way to the ground and training the forthcoming tall, straight shoots into a fence.

Guava

Pineapple guava seems to do best in our climate, but if you have a greenhouse or a hot, south slope, try strawberry guava too. The flowers and foliage of both species are visually stunning, making them an excellent choice for a low hedge across a front yard or in an intimate courtyard garden.

Filberts

Filberts can be grown in a wide range of shapes and situations. Plant as part of a mixed-plant guild or in rows along a large boundary and coppice into tall, permeable hedges. Filbert makes the best bent-wood outdoor furniture — it lasts longer than wicker or even plastic!

Rosemary

Attractive to hummingbirds, bumblebees and a zillion other pollinators, rosemary is known in folklore to repel bad energies from the home and garden. There are two basic types: shrubby, upright rosemary, and prostrate types that will spill down slopes and terraces. I love the way rosemary looks in a front yard garden with other Mediterranean plants like figs, brussel sprouts and oregano. Once established, all types of rosemary are resistant to deer, drought, and disease. Too easy!

Seaberry/Sea Buckthorn

With shimmering, silvery foliage and tiny, abundant, bright-orange fruit that tastes like sour-patch candy, seaberries (Hippophae rhamnoides) add a yummy, nitrogen-fixing conversation piece to the garden. Fruit has seven times as much vitamin C as lemons, ripens in September and can go until mid-winter.

Sunchokes (aka Jerusalem artichoke)

These will grow in otherwise undesirable garden areas, such as the alley behind your house or that strip of land between the garage and the neighbor's fence. The more you dig them, the more they grow, so place them with intent and plan to leave them in that area forever. The starchy, edible tubers can cause gas but if you soak them in water overnight and rinse them before cooking, that really seems to help.

Tree Collards

These lanky perennial brassicas will provide year-round nutritious greens, even in a foot or two of snow! Did you know that Brassica oleracea is one of the oldest cultivated species of plants? I love to imagine the rich, rocky banks of the Fertile Crescent, terraced and stacked with blooming collards!

Most of the plants in this list will do fine when grown together, as long as everyone has enough elbow room to mature. Use them as companions for larger trees, planted close together in a guild to support each other's needs. Or plant them in a line or long curve to create boundaries and microclimates. A well-placed hedge can also serve as a windbreak, privacy barrier, or conceal an ugly area. Make a raspberry spiral with a small lawn of clover in the center and it becomes a secret fort for naps and playtime. Do your own experiments and let me know how it works out! ●

MOORE'S Sleep World

Hum Plate

Paris, New York, Mexico City

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

Coming Out of Your Shell

The French have certainly, as they say, foutent dans la merde, or screwed up hard, over the years (colonization, Polanski, etc.). But when it comes to making the best of tough times, the home of La Résistance is a solid role model. And so French is a fine choice for dinner with a heartbroken friend. In particular, France knows when to throw butter at a problem.

Humboldt Bay Bistro (1436 Second St.), which has taken over the bay views and corner nooks of the former Casa Blanca, is turning out some Gallic standards to cut through a pre-winter chill. There are little cauldrons of French onion soup bubbled over with gruyere ($6) and escargot ($9) to help you comfort eat more like an attractively teary Catherine Deneuve than you would at home in your sweats. Unlike the draggingly relentless snails that ravage your garden, escargot is hard to find in Humboldt. Here the tender, dark spirals of meat arrive with neither shells nor tongs (whether this is a relief or disappointment to you may be related to whether you're wearing a dry clean-only shirt), swimming in compound butter. Just as the horn section blaring "La Marseillaise" drowns out the singing Nazis in the film Casablanca, so, too, do the little baths of herbed butter, white wine, shallots and garlic push back the chill of a day gone dark too early. Dip the grilled baguette slices in the remaining broth and other clouds hanging over you may recede enough for you to gather your strength and remember that the lights finally came back on in Paris, after all.

Escargot and butter, butter, butter.

Reuben Rubric

The famed Carnegie Deli in New York City has announced it will close its doors at the end of 2016, never again to stun tourists and enable regulars with its mountainous signature sandwiches, dizzying stratified cliff faces of corned beef and pastrami. Take a moment to pour out some pickle juice on the ground.

How to properly move through the stages of grief from so far away? Luckily Humboldt Smokehouse (310 Fifth St., Eureka) has added to its menu the pastrami the owners have been tinkering with since opening. It's smoked for 24 hours but add in the spicing and curing and you're looking at a 12-day process that yields a deep red, briney, peppery meat that breaks apart with the slightest pull.

The Reuben ($11.99) is technically a Rachel, the spicier pastrami-filled sibling of the traditional hot corned beef sandwich on rye with Russian dressing, sauerkraut and Swiss cheese. Instead of the infinite layering of thin slices, ¼-inch thick slabs are fanned out on seedy, crusty rye bread with the kraut and cold-smoked Swiss cheese. And technically the relish in the side of dressing takes us into Thousand

Hello, Reuben. Or is it Rachel?

Every corner? Yes, please.

Island rather than Russian waters, but let's not kvetch when there's a nice hit of horseradish to balance the creamy tang. Worry about having enough napkins.

And if you can stand at the counter waiting for your sandwich without ordering a little paper boat of Sriracha and brown sugar bacon (3.99), you're stronger than we are. But less happy. Unlike the hardened brown sugar crusted bacon you want to love but can't because it's lost its warm, fatty charm, these jewel-like chunks of cured pork are equal parts tender and chewy with buttery fat and exactly the right heat to balance the sweetness. And if there's any left by the time your sandwich comes, well, that's a kind of victory, too.

Taco Trucks on Every Corner

Can we get back to that campaign promise/threat? It sounds fantastic. It beats a "chicken in every pot," which leaves you to come up with side dishes. No, life with tacos always in honking distance sounds far better.

El Pueblo Market (3600 Broadway, Eureka) has recently extended its empire of pan dulce and chicharones, rolling a slick, chili pepper-mustachioed taco truck into its parking lot. Taco truck romantics — those who wax poetic over weather-worn beaters parked in seedy alleys — may be disoriented by the gleam of stainless steel, the minimalist-chic menu and the shining hubcaps. Take a steadying breath. Smell the meat.

For $2.95 each, the tacos are generous mounds of meat topped with requisite onion and cilantro on thick corn tortillas. The lengua comes in soft cubes, but is outshone by the salty char of juicy asada chunks and the buttery curls of tripe. All are splashed with smoky, red salsa and further improved with a tip of the accompanying cup of green salsa. Burritos are available, but the companion who ordered one on the day we visited made quick work of it before photos or samples could be taken. The tight metallic cylinder remains, to the rest of us, a mystery. That, really, is the strongest of recommendations. ●

A Country Murder

Agatha Christie's The Hollow at NCRT

By David Jervis
frontrow@northcoastjournal.com

The mystery novel, that great niche of fiction, has no greater name to represent it than the late Agatha Christie. North Coast Repertory Theatre's The Hollow is a staging of a Christie-penned play that made its London debut in 1951 and is based on her book of the same name from five years earlier.

One change from the book is the disappearance of Hercule Poirot, a character so widely known that he's taken on a life of his own (and continues to be portrayed in film and television to this day, long after Christie's death in 1980). The diminutive and oh-so deductive Belgian detective was a bigger hit with the public than with his creator, who apparently grew to loathe the character and kept him alive in the pages of her stories for no other reason than his popularity among her readership.

The play falls perfectly into the subgenre of the English country-house drama, giving the play a firm sense of space as well of time, with the traditional premise of friends having come to the country. Whether one or more arrived with murder on their minds is not always clear but if not, someone is driven to that state within an act or two.

At the start of the play, set in 1940s postwar England, we meet Sir Henry Angkatell (William Welton), the gun-collecting patriarch of the household, speaking with his younger cousin Henrietta (Bayley Brown) as she finishes a sculpture just outside. There is also Sir Henry's somewhat daft but indomitably cheerful wife Lucy (an excellent Willi Welton), who may also be the most savvy observer here. The guests include cousin Edward Angkatell (Morgan Cox), as well as Midge Harvey (Kelsey Larson), still another cousin. Midge serves as a bit of a family outcast by refusing financial support and continuing to work in a dress shop, something the rest of the family finds (naturally) to be rather common. Edward also is the present owner of Ainswick, an estate remembered with wistful nostalgia for a since-downsized British Empire. And there's the fact that Midge and Edward are clearly in love with each other — see, that's how trouble starts brewing at country houses on just such weekends.

Last to arrive are the rather bumptious and bothersome Dr. John Cristow (Montel Vander Horck III) and his clearly unhappy wife Gerda (Sarah Traywick). John and Henrietta are clearly having an affair, adding to the intrigue. Tea and sandwiches are served, gin is poured, flourished gold cigarette cases are opened at turns in conversation and a butler and a maid come and go.

The Hollow may start off slowly but by midway it has worked up a good pace with strength from its sturdy cast. When the murder arrives, with the audience seeing the victim but not the shooter, we're engaged. Notable among the cast are the aforementioned Willi Welton, who has some of the best comic lines and brings some canny strength to the role, along with Vander Horck, as the doctor who's gotten himself into a predicament. Caroline McFarland turns up later in the play the pivotal role of Veronica Craye, a movie star with a new home down the way a bit. (Think she might have a past with Dr. Cristow, too? You're on the right track.) Finally, Scott Marcus and Tyler Egerer (of NCRT's It's a Wonderful Life: A Radio Play) respectively play the Scotland Yard inspector and sergeant in charge of investigating the murder. The two make good use of their stage time in the second act as they confer about motives and interview everyone in the household. They are wry representatives as outsiders from a different class. Like the rest of the cast, under the sharp direction of Calder Johnson, they help make The Hollows a top-notch example of its genre. So who needs Hercule Poirot on the case anyhow?

The Hollow plays at the North Coast Repertory Theatre on Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through Dec. 9, with Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. on Nov. 27 and Dec. 4, as well as an 8 p.m. show on Thursday, Dec. 8. For more information, call 444-NCRT or visit www.ncrt.net.

The Turkey Playlist

By Andy Powell
thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

Jeffrey Lewis & Los Bolts go multimedia at the Miniplex at 8 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 25. Courtesy of the artist

Smack dab in the middle of Halloween and Christmahanakwanzaa, Thanksgiving always seems more of an autumn holiday than a winter one for me. Yes, I know winter doesn't actually start for another month but we'd be forgiven for forgetting that given our recent weather. So with this seeming transition between the seasons, I began to think about what a fitting playlist would be for the turkey-centric gathering on Thursday. Of course, every gathering is different and there is no one-size-fits-all playlist, but since no one asked, I'll share what will be making it onto mine (in no particular order) when family shows up on Thursday.

The selection of jazz will probably be more fitting toward the actual dinner and I might start off with a Jim Pepper album I recently borrowed (thanks Carl) called Comin' and Goin'. It is filled with influences from his Native American heritage and nice jazz touches throughout. Keep in mind that this came out in 1987 and has some dated saxophone sounds, but it's a nice tweak on much of the jazz we're used to. Happenings by Bobby Hutcherson (whom we recently lost) is a great showcase for jazz vibraphone and it never hurts to have Herbie Hancock on piano. Eastern Sounds from Yusef Lateef has always been one of my favorites and with its use of more than just the ionian and aeolian modes, it's a nice semi-exotic jazz album. Tom Waits' Small Change is a darkly beautiful album. It is perhaps fitting at the end of the night when you're wasted and bleeding from a fist fight with your father-in-law over who got to carve the turkey. Although definitely more of a winter album, Vince Guaraldi's A Charlie Brown Christmas always goes great with family and a fire by the hearth.

I tend to gravitate more to the rock world and there are plenty of albums in this vein that are wholly inappropriate for family gatherings. So it's not always easy to find something that goes with the subtle and restrained mood of Thanksgiving. That said, here are some that I'll probably sneak in earlier in the day. Songs from the Wood from Jethro Tull reminds me of shivering a bit in front of a campfire but its acoustic touches and medieval merriment complement a poor man's feast. Traffic's John Barleycorn Must Die has enough flute to follow Tull and enough touches of jazz to transition into dinner. I'll leave that to you. Van Morrison has a lot of albums to offer that could work well but I'll go with St. Dominic's Preview this evening. Songs: Ohia from The Magnolia Electric Co. has some somber alt-country flavor which could pair well with Song from Lullabye for the Working Class. I haven't listened to Simon and Garfunkel's Bookends in a bit; I'm just hoping we don't all start sobbing during "America." With some folk and a bit of rage barely under the surface, The Throes from Two Gallants might also be a fitting late nighter. Ted Hawkins' The Next Hundred Years is mostly acoustic guitar and some bluesy/soulful vocals from Ted with light percussion and organ occasionally floating around. That about does it for my playlist at the moment. I may improvise with some Nickleback when I'm ready for folks to leave. Let me know what you'll be listening to — my email address is below. Let's find things to be thankful this year.

Thursday

It's Thanksgiving, aka Turkey Day, Dead Bird Day, etc., so stay in tonight and play some good music while you clean up after ungrateful company. Save your energy to rage during the weekend.

Friday

Start burning off some of those calories tonight dancing to the classic country songs of the Redwood Ramblers who will be at the Mad River Brewery Tasting Room starting at 6 p.m. and playing for free. If you feel you've burned too many calories, balance things out with some local beer. Not too far away, you'll find fellow locals The Movers and The Shakers rockin' it up at the Fieldbrook Family Market around 7:30 p.m. and the only money you'll spend is if you pick up groceries. After a three-year break from visiting Humboldt County — which is forgivable since he lives in the Big Apple — Jeffery Lewis & Los Bolts revisit the redwoods. A singer/songwriter and cartoonist, Jeffery is also "the best lyricist working in the US today," according to one Jarvis Cocker. A bit of an "anti-folker," Jeffery often has cartoons and drawings projected to visually complement the music. So with that in mind, it's fitting that local visual storytelling act The ComiX Trip will be opening up the show. It'll be the official premiere of some short films from said trip, featuring "claymation, some animation and stop-motion using paper, as well as live footage." So delight your eyes and ears at the Miniplex tonight at 8 p.m. for only $5. You can also find some free jazz — as in monetarily free — at Six Rivers Brewery at 9 p.m. with the Opera Alley Cats, and some good jams at the Bear River Casino at the same time and for the same price with Blue Rhythm Revue.

Saturday

In last week's column I mentioned the final performance of the RLA Jazz Trio with Bobby Amirkhanian, who is heading out to Vegas to hopefully perform with Cirque du Soleil in the near future. It appears his official going away party is tonight at the Miniplex. He and his friends will be celebrating his send off with music from Nirvana cover band Lounge Act and also local cover band The Undercovers. The party starts around 8 p.m. and music begins around 9:15 p.m. There's a $5 cover charge going to the bands. Music in the Delta roots vein will be wafting through the air at Six Rivers Brewery tonight courtesy of Crosby Tyler. He'll be joined by a full band tonight around 9 p.m. for this free show. ●

Stuffed? Walk it off at the Post Holiday Hike on Friday, Nov. 25 from 1 to 4 p.m. at Humboldt Coastal Nature Center (free). Have somebody lace up your sneakers, then get out and explore the 118-acre land trust with the Friends of the Dunes. Suitable for all ages.

Courtesy of the Ferndale Repertory Theatre

Need a refresher on the true meaning of Christmas? A Charlie Brown Christmas is always good for that. Ferndale Repertory Theatre presents a faithful stage adaptation of the 1965 TV special on Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 2 and 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2 p.m. starting Nov. 25 through Dec. 18 ($16, $14, $8). Note: Nov. 25 will only have an 8 p.m. performance.

Mama Mia

Mama Mia!, the ultimate feel-good musical set in Greece about a mother, her daughter and three possible dads, comes to the Van Duzer Theatre with all of its ABBA gold on Tuesday, Nov. 29 and Wednesday, Nov. 30 at 8 p.m. ($66, $35 HSU). And we say thank you for the music.

#Blessed

On Thanksgiving, before you gather to bow your head with your family and give thanks, slip down to the seaside to send blessings to those who work on the sea. Every year, community members gather in Trinidad to offer prayers and well wishes for a bountiful and safe fishing season. Put on by a group of commercial fishermen's wives and loved ones for the last 21 years, the Trinidad Blessing of the Fleet takes place Thursday, Nov. 24 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at Trinidad Town Hall(free).

The Greater Trinidad Chamber of Commerce invites all to join the family-friendly community event, which features a traditional Native American blessing to the four directions given by Axel Lindgren III and his family, followed by a non-denominational blessing from Pastor Allison Berry from the Church of the Joyful Healer.

Entertaining the crowd are the Redwood Ramblers with their lively covers of classic country songs, and keeping folks warm and sated, the Trinidad Rancheria provides fresh coffee, hot chocolate and snacks. Don't miss Trinidad School's fourth grade students' pictures of fishing boats and poems hanging along the fence at Trinidad Bay Bed and Breakfast. Each year, one picture is chosen as the following year's event poster. This year's event will be held in Trinidad Town Hall due to the weather.

Haul out the Holly

They're here. Faster than they came last year, it seems, the holidays are back. Thanksgiving, Hanukkah and Christmas, those seasonal siblings, are at our door with casseroles and kids in tow, ready or not. Thankfully, Old Town's got its tinsel together. The picturesque assemblage of shops and restaurants ushers in the most wonderful time of the year with events to get you into the holiday spirit.

On Thursday, Nov. 24, make a withdrawal from the old calorie bank before the big meal at the Turkey Trot, a 3-mile walk/run through Old Town starting at 9 a.m. at the Gazebo; late registration at 7:30 a.m. at Old Town Coffee & Chocolates ($10, $20 with shirt).

Santa swings into town via fire truck on Friday, Nov. 25 for photo ops with the tiny tots from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Gazebo (free).

On Saturday, Nov. 26, leave the Big Box craziness behind and make local businesses your target. Small Business Saturday, the kinder, gentler shopping experience, takes place all day throughout Old Town and downtown. DJ KEv plays holiday music at the Gazebo from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and Santa's back from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Also on Saturday, bundle up for the Snowball Drop, a human-made blizzard with hundreds of snowballs (ping pong balls good for discounts, gifts and/or giveaways at local businesses), gently floating down to waiting shoppers after being shot out of a "snowball cannon" at 11:30 a.m. sharp – at the Gazebo (free).

FANTASTIC BEASTS AND WHERE TO FIND THEM. I suppose if I felt any sort of connection to, or even interest in, the universe of Harry Potter, I might have approached this with more enthusiasm. But even having neutral feelings about the whole affair, I was distracted and bored throughout, and left disappointed. I took a run at the Harry Potter series just as it was becoming the juggernaut everyone knows and seems to love so much. I found the first book pleasant enough, I guess, but not nearly as magical and enrapturing as I had been made to believe it would be. Still, I finished it and decided that was enough of that. In the name of transparency, I have to admit I watched the first movie, Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone (2001) shortly after its release, hoping for an adaptation that might lend more depth or color to J.K. Rowling's world. Instead, director Chris Columbus delivered a vapid, to-the-letter version of the source material, a visual Cliff's Notes for a book that was hardly impenetrable to start with. Not that my opinion matters in the face of Potter's global domination, but there it is. I have been made aware that the series skews progressively darker, so maybe there is something in it for me after all; I will likely never find out.

That lengthy preamble brings us to the present day, when Fantastic Beasts, a distant prequel to the events of the Potter stories, carries on the grand tradition of utterly baffling commercial success.

The year is 1926. Newt Scamander (Eddie Redmayne) is a wizard, an author and a former student at Hogwarts Academy. He was expelled but apparently still remembered fondly by Professor Dumbledore. His current project involves cataloging, capturing and occasionally re-homing magical creatures (see title above). At the outset of the final leg of his expedition, Scamander stops over in New York. He gets entangled with a would-be baker named Kowlaski (Dan Fogler) and accidentally switches suitcases with him. This, of course, leads to some fantastic beasts running wild through the city. It also draws the attention of a demoted magical investigator, or auror, named Tina Goldstein (Katherine Waterston). Goldstein arrests Scamander, remanding him to the Magical Congress of the United States (Macusa). Ominous agent Graves (Colin Farrell) suspects criminal collusion between the two, finding them guilty in the recent death of a senator, which was actually the work of an altogether more sinister, uncontrollable magical entity.

There's even more plot to it, for some reason, and it just keeps rattling along. Creatures run rampant through the city; Scamander and Kowalski have to catch them. There are rumors of a long-missing, evil warlock kicking around. There are too many characters, too much story, all too thinly drawn, and the end result is somehow dull and irritating at the same time.

Redmayne does fine work, although his Chaplin riffs and lovable-doofus affect almost wear thin by movie's end. Fogler more than holds his own as a foil with some moments of bright comic relief. The female characters, Waterston's in particular, feel underdeveloped and secondary: set dressing with a few lines of dialogue.

Director David Yates (of a number of the Potter movies) and his team create a vast, fascinating atmosphere in which to place the action. But the action within it — antic, rambling and insubstantial — undermines the depth and detail of the setting. PG13. 133M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK, MINOR.

MOONLIGHT offers proof that specificity may be the most direct route to universality. It does not attempt to take on the Big Issues, per se, but in telling one young man's story, it manages to fold in a number of elements of the conversation everyone should be having about those issues. It is also gorgeously photographed, finely acted and delicately, patiently told; an unassuming little movie that is bigger even than its greatest attributes.

A quasi-biography in three parts, Moonlight follows the development of Chiron, a quiet, contemplative kid, world-weary even at an early age, trying to find his way in the rough neighborhoods of Miami. In the first part we meet Juan (Mahershala Ali), a dealer who runs corners but tries to maintain some kindness. He finds Chiron (Alex Hibbert), whom the other kids tauntingly refer to as Little, cowering in a boarded-up crack hole, hiding from his tormentors. Juan buys the boy a meal, trying gently to coax anything more than a grunt out of him. Eventually, after Juan brings Chiron back to their house, Juan's partner Teresa (Janelle Monae) gets him talking a little, and Juan is able to take Chiron home to his mom, Paula (Naomie Harris). As it turns out, Paula is a customer of Juan's and doesn't offer Chiron much in the way of mothering. Other than the safety of Juan and Teresa's house, his only relief comes in a tentative friendship with Kevin (Jaden Piner).

Part II, a decade later, follows Chiron's growing up, coping with his addled mother and the cruelty of his classmates. He's uncomfortable in his own skin and unsure of his sexuality. Another 10 years finds him a grown man who has assumed the identity of Black (Trevante Rhodes), a distilled, hardened version of Juan. He's walled-off and alone until his estranged childhood friend Kevin (Andre Holland) reaches out to apologize and re-connect.

Written and directed by Barry Jenkins, Moonlight is as focused and intentional a work of art as any I've recently experienced. Jenkins directs all of his actors to beautiful, painful, honest performances. His use of the moving camera, with fixed focal lengths requiring it to move in to intimate distance in order to engage its subject, adds a visual dimension to the narrative's themes of intimacy and absence. The movie doesn't attempt to moralize or get grandiose, but in its attention to the little things, the reduction of so many cultural and universal struggles to one young man's growing up, it makes a much wider and more hopeful picture of the world. PG13. 111M. BROADWAY, MINOR.

T.S. No. 0125001680 Loan No. 23078897-1 APN: 111-132-014-000 NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE NOTE: YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED 6/28/2007. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

On 12/8/2016 at 10:30 AM On the steps to the front entrance to the County Courthouse, 825 5th Street, Eureka, California, Old Republic Title Company, a California Corporation, as the duly appointed Trustee under the Deed of Trust recorded on 6/29/2007, as Instrument No. 2007-19540-19, of Official Records in the office of the Recorder of Humboldt County, California, executed by: Dearing Paige Hockman and Kurt O Wygant, wife and husband, as Trustor, Northern Trust, NA, as Lender/Beneficiary, WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER FOR (payable at time of sale in lawful money of the United States by cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in the state) all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by it under said Deed of Trust in the property situated in said County, California, describing the land therein: As more fully described on said Deed of Trust. The street address or other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 184 Shaker Road Whitethorn, CA 95589-9112 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. Said sale will be made is an "AS IS"condition, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s), advances, if any, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, estimated fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by the Deed of Trust, to wit: $486,450.89 (Estimated). Accrued interest and additional advances, if any, will increase this figure prior to sale. It is possible that at the time of sale the opening bid may be less than the total indebtedness due. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 888-988-6736 or visit this Internet Web site www.salestrack.tdsf.com, using the file number assigned to this case 0125001680. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED February 18, 2014. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE, IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDINGS AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on December 8, 2016, at the hour of 10:30 a.m., on the steps to the front entrance of the Humboldt County Recorder, located at 835 5th Street, City of Eureka, County of Humboldt, State of California, PRIME PACIFIC, a corporation, as Trustee will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, check drawn by state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state, all payable at the time of sale, real property situated in the County of Humboldt, State of California, and the purported address is 605 Rancho Sequoia Drive, Alderpoint, CA 95511 (APN: 216-318-008), and is more particularly described in the Deed of Trust referenced below.

Directions may be obtained pursuant to a written request submitted to the beneficiary: Jose Luis Caballero and Cathy Anne Caballero, Trustees, c/o Prime Pacific at (707) 468-5300 or mailing request to Prime Pacific, P.O. Box 177, Ukiah, CA 95482–within 10 days from the first publication of this notice.

If a street address or common designation of property is shown in this notice, no warranty is given as to its completeness or correctness. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the property address and other common designation, if any, shown herein.

The total amount of the unpaid obligation, together with reasonable estimate of the costs, expenses and advances at the time of the initial publication of this notice is $198,173.12. It is possible that at the time of sale the opening bid may be less than the total indebtedness due.

The sale will be made without covenant or warranty of title, possession, or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of the sale conferred in that certain Deed of Trust, all advances thereunder, interest provided therein, and fees, charges and expenses of the trustee. The Deed of Trust was executed by Allison R. Berry, an unmarried woman, as the original Trustor, recorded February 24, 2014, in Document No. 2014-003287-5, Official Records of Humboldt County, and said property will be sold "as is" and no warranty or representation is made concerning its present condition.

Notice of Default and election to sell the described real property under the mentioned deed of trust was recorded on August 5, 2016, Document No. 2016-014735, Official Records of Humboldt County.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call PRIME PACIFIC at (707) 468-5300. You may also visit our website–primepacificforeclosures.com. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the website. THE BEST WAY TO VERIFY POSTPONEMENT INFORMATION IS TO ATTEND THE SCHEDULED SALE.

The mortgagee or beneficiary is not required to give notice under CA Civil Code Section 2923.5.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF DONNA S JACKSON CASE NO. PR160295

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both,
DONNA S JACKSON aka DONNA SHERMAN JACKSON aka DONNA GAY JACKSON
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, DOUGLAS P. JACKSON
In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that IAIN HAUKKA be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held on December 8, 2016 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 8.
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF PREPARATION OF A DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT REPORT FOR THE FOR THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE OF EMERGENCY SERVICES RED MOUNTAIN COMMUNICATION SITE RELOCATION PROJECT AND NOTICE OF PUBLIC SCOPING MEETINGS

As lead agency, the Department of General Services–Real Estate Services Division (DGS), with assistance from the State of California, Governor's Office of Emergency Services (Cal OES), will prepare an environmental impact report (EIR/EA) under the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) for the relocation of the Red Mountain communication site (proposed project). In its role as the responsible agency with respect to authorizing use or occupancy of Redwood National Park lands at Rodgers Peak and Alder camp, the National Park Service (NPS) will participate in the environmental review in a manner that satisfies federal requirements under the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and ensures that the EIR/EA, and underlying administrative record supports the NPS decision on the proposed project.

In accordance with the Six Rivers National Forest Land and Resource Management Plan, all facilities must be removed from Red Mountain by the end of their permit terms. Three new sites are being evaluated for installing new communications facilities to replace the functions of the facilities at Red Mountain. These sites are: Rattlesnake Peak, Alder Camp, and Rodgers Peak. New towers would be located on mountain peaks to provide adequate lines of sight. Year-round access is necessary for maintenance purposes, and there will be a reliable power source for all season operation.

DGS published the Notice of Preparation (NOP; 14 CCR 15082) for the proposed project. The purpose of the NOP is to inform responsible and trustee agencies and interested parties that Cal OES, with assistance from DGS, is preparing a Draft EIR/EA for the proposed project. DGS, as lead agency, is seeking your views on the scope and content of the descriptions of the significant environmental issues and reasonable alternatives and mitigation measures to be explored in the Draft EIR/EA.

DGS, in coordination with OES, will hold two public scoping meetings. The first meeting will be on November 29, 2016, 4:00 p.m. to 7 p.m., at the Yurok Tribal Council Chambers, 190 Klamath Drive, Klamath, CA 95548. The second meeting will be on November 30, 2016, 3:00 p.m. to 7 p.m., at the Six Rivers National Forest Headquarters Office, 1330 Bayshore Way, Eureka, CA 95501. The purpose of the scoping meetings is to present information about the proposed project, DGS's process and timelines, and to solicit input, including written comments, on the scope and content of the Draft EIR/EA.

Interested parties, including public agencies, are encouraged to attend a meeting to learn more about the proposed project and the environmental review process, to express any concerns about the proposed project and to offer suggestions regarding the environmental impacts, including any mitigation measures and alternatives.

All scoping comments must be received in writing by December 16, 2016, 5:00 p.m. (the end of the 30-day public scoping period). Please send all comments via mail to: Stephanie Coleman, Senior Environmental Planner, State of California Department of General Services, Real Estate Services Division, Project Management & Development Branch, 707 Third Street, 4th Floor, MS509, West Sacramento, CA 95605, OR via email to: environmental@dgs.ca.gov (subject line must include "Red Mountain Communication Site Relocation Project NOP Scoping Comments"). All comments on environmental issues received during the public comment period will be considered and addressed in the Draft EIR/EA, which is anticipated to be available for public review in Spring of 2017.

Life: The Long Game

By Barry Evans
fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

Last time, I made the case that life on Earth started on Mars. Now, 4 billion years later, that life has evolved to the point where we can start thinking about spreading it farther afield, that is, into the galaxy. Because of the near-miraculous sequence of steps required to get from inanimate to animate — from chemistry to life ("Kick-starting Life," Nov. 10) — and given the absence of evidence for ETs, it may well be that humankind is the only conscious life in the Milky Way.

Which is a kinda-sorta case for acting as stewards of life, spreading the wealth by taking it to the stars. We're in the early, inefficient stages; it took 3,000 tons of Saturn V rocket to put 1/5 ton of human flesh on the moon. But we can do a lot better than that. Here are three possible scenarios.

Smart Robots: We send robotic spacecraft to planets and moons of suitable stars. Once safely landed, they use native materials to copy themselves many times over and launch their progeny into the depths of space to repeat the process, thereby colonizing our entire galaxy in a few million years. These machines would be sufficiently smart to be classified as "life" by most standards.

Noah's Arks: "Getting from here to there is the problem of engineering. ... That is the easy part. The hard part is knowing what to do when you get there. That is the problem of biology," according to physicist Freeman Dyson. His idea is transport biological life to barren planets and moons using many ostrich-egg sized spacecraft — miniatures of Noah's ark — containing "living seeds with the genetic instructions for growing millions of species of microbes and plants and animals, including males and females of sexual species, adapted to live together and support one another in an alien environment."

Super-humans: Superman's coolest ability, rather taken for granted, is that he can survive in space wearing nothing but Spandex. Taking a cue from him (and Margaret Atwood's dystopian novel Oryx and Crake), we can imagine adapting ourselves to harsh environments through genetic engineering. Instead of enclosing our relatively frail bodies in bulky space-suits, we bioengineer humans to, say, walk around on Mars au naturel. Nature has already given us some pointers here on Earth, in the form of "extremophiles," creatures that thrive in what we would consider outrageously alien conditions: acidic hot springs, sunless caves, half-mile-deep oceanic hydrothermal vents. Once we figure out Mars, we can go on to adapt our bodies for survival in yet more extreme conditions, perhaps even in empty space. (We might start off losing the body, keeping the brain to create a cyborg flesh-machine hybrid.)

So here's the long game: Some 400 million years ago, our ancestors left the three-dimensional freedom of the oceans for the two-dimensional surface of land. Which, from our point of view, worked fine, allowing us to evolve into big-brained, self-aware, bipedal creatures with awesome hands, eyes and ears. Now it's time for us to reclaim our three-dimensional legacy in (where else?) space. Not this generation but soon, one way or another, we'll build smart machines or life-filled arks, or we'll bioengineer ourselves in order to not just launch into space, but to live there. ●

Women's Product Lines

Humboldt Patient Resource Center (HPRC) has seen a recent increase in requests for medical cannabis products to address women's health issues. After consideration of our patients needs and investigation into cutting edge products, HPRC is proud to announce the launch of our Women's Health Division! Now available at HPRC Arcata are cannabis products that are designed and formulated to assist with women's health issues that may include:

- Endometriosis
- Premenstrual Syndrome
- Perimenopause
- Menopause
- Anxiety
- Pelvic Inflammatory Disorder (PID)
- Ovarian Cysts
- General Health

Starting November 1st patients can access Women's Health Products at HPRC. Our new product lines are provided by premier vendors from across the State of California and high quality local manufacturers including:

- Honey Bee Buzzed
- Humboldt Harvest
- Whoopi and Maya
- Magnatrophe
- Moxie Meds
- Foria

Our new product lines include tinctures, suppositories, topical salves, edibles, and bathing soaks. By providing unique products made by women, for women, HPRC is excited to make a positive impact on the women in our community. Stop by our collective to investigate if any of these new products can help improve your daily well-being! As always, ask your doctor before making changes to your current medicine.
